History of The Bull

Originally called The Bulls Head, The Bull is in the Gun Quarter of Birmingham

The exact date of its construction is difficult to determine, but Price Street appears to have developed in two sections, firstly the old street on the corner of which stands number one, the Bull and then the second section called New Buildings, also starting from number one. People who know the area well claim that as early as 1729 there was a gun maker residing at number one Price Street. He was also a beer retailer.

In the middle of the last century, it was common for the 'gun gaffers' to pay their employees wages in the Bull. This practice inevitably led to much drinking and subsequently much brawling on the sawdust covered floor. At this time there was a strong Catholic community in the Gun Quarter and often the landlord would summon the local priest to sort out the fighters rather than enlist the services of the 'Peelers'. There was also a resident fiddler, who would continue playing whilst all around him was in complete fiasco.

Now, after extensive alteration, the pub enters another phase of history. Whether the next two hundred years will have the same colour as the last two hundred only time will tell.
